

ECAWBM Examination Sub-specialty Behavioural Medicine

Examination Honour Code

The contents of the ECAWBM Theoretical and Practical examinations are confidential. You are prohibited from divulging any information about the questions, images, or case material included in the ECAWBM Theoretical and Practical Examination to anyone during or after the examination. For the Practical examination this includes discussion of format of cases, such as number of images, types of images, “hidden” views or supplemental studies presented to you. Your description of the case, medical management, or final diagnosis may not be discussed with anyone.

For the Theoretical examination, use of any electronic devices during the examination other than those provided to you by ECAWBM is strictly prohibited and will be considered a violation of the Honour Code. Your confidentiality is required in order to ensure each candidate has an equal opportunity to pass the examination. If any candidate is thought to be in violation of the Honour Code, a detailed report with charges of the violation will be sent to the ECAWBM Board for action. A candidate found to be in violation of the Honour Code by the College Board will have their examination results nullified.

All candidates must read and sign the following statement prior to participating in the examination:

I have read and understand the ECAWBM Honour Code. I agree to keep the contents of the ECAWBM Examination confidential. I agree to report any inappropriate discussions or actions I observe to the Examination Committee. I will not provide assistance to, or accept assistance from anyone during the examination.
